In and about with busy feet, Light and fleet, She keeps his cabin oosy and neat. With shouldered ax I see him go Through the snow. To elear the land for harrow and hoe. Over his roof-tree curls the smoke, While the stroke Of his ax resounds on ash and oak. When the warm days oome in early spring, She will bring Her work to the woods and sew and sing. Tis pleasant to feel her watching near; Joy to hear Her voice in the woodland high and clear. Together they talk in the new-fallen tree, And fonsoe The work of their hands in the dava to be. Where the beech comes crashing down, and the lithe Branches writhe, He will turn the furrow and swing the scythe. A r--bj the doorway she will set. Nor forget Pansies and pink- and mignonette. Before their door in the summer morm Waves the corn. Tis winter again, and a babe is born. Not for the glories of wealth and art Would they part With that small treasure of home and heart. Dear heaven 1 what springs of bliss are stirred When is heard Its laugh or its first low-lisping word! A flower let fall by. the Infinite Love hag lit In their path, and brought Clod s peace with it. Gone long ago are the hut of poles, Stumps and knolls; A frame-house now is the shelter of soul. By the river...
