After 1 had been some time in the groves of Marriage, I met with troops of new acquaintance; Care and his numerous family were continually visiting me, nor did they keep away at all the more for my seeming not to admire their company. Sickness, a fell monster, kept me chained to my bed for a considerable time, and almost baffled the strength of MediCine and Patience, two very powerful giants, to overcome him. In short, I saw Simplicity and Affection hang down their heads with sorrow, for the mischiefs they had unwittingly brought upon me. me. Time stole away imperceptibly, and having overcome some of these difficulties, Reflection stood before me, and at her right hand I perceived my old friend Experience, that had so friendly offered me her assistance in my earlier days, and whose advice I had so thoughtlessly abandoned, because it did not just then agree with my inclinations, and for which I had bitterly suffered. I burst into tears at the fight of her, and felt violent, but unavailing perturbations of heart. Why, O Experience! said I, were you so cruel as to leave me to such weak guides as you know 1 had with me, who were blind themselves, and could ill teach me to discern plainly? what had I done that you gave me up so soon? I have known some whom you have closely followed, not older than I was, and who have always partaken of...
