C., on the 6th day of March, 1845. He was the sixth son of the late Philip R. Fendall, LL. D., a distinguished lawyer of that city, and a typical gentleman of the old school, one whom native Washingtonians delight to remember as an example of a type famous for its courtesy of manner and dignity of carriage, combined with the utmost simplicity of character and purity of life. The early school days of Mr. Fendall were passed at the academy of Professor O. C. Wight, and there he remained until the year 1860, when he entered the preparatory department of the Columbian University of the District of Columbia. After passing his examination for the freshman class, he devoted his vacation to such diligent study that when the classes were organized in the following September, he was able to enter as sophomore, thus, by his ambition, diligence and application, shortening his course one year. During his whole collegiate life he was a faithful and earnest student; he led his class upon graduation, and was selected by his mates to deliver the valedictory-a duty coveted by all,...
