It may not, however, be entirely out of order to mention briefly, and in a general way, some of the other processes that may be met with in factories other than the classes mentioned in this article. In the manufacture of cotton-rubber-lined fire hose the rubber lining is made up of calendered rubber stock formed onto a steel tube and semi-vulcanized. This lining is then drawn through a woven cotton jacket and is vulcanized in place with live steam under pressure. Rubber garden hose is made up of frictioned fabric ami calendered rubber stock wound on steel tubes and vulcanized. Rubber carriage tires and light vehicle tires are made by means of a tube machine and vulcanized flat under pressure between special grooved steam heated plates in lengths of twenty feet or so, several lengths being vulcanized at one time. Rubber tubes are made up around mandrels and allowed throughout the vulcanizing process to remain embedded in pulverized chalk, which affords a support for many other articles that tend to lose their shape during this process. Seamless tubing is made with a tube machine much in the same manner as lead pipe, by forcing the mixed compound through a die and curing in chalk as mentioned above. Hollow articles, such as playing ballsv injection bottles, etc., are vulcanized in iron...
