The land is all low, and at a small distance you see the town of Guerande, with a high pointed steeple; and within the point of Croisic comes in view another high steeple of stone, called La Tour de Bas, by which marks this coast is easily known. When you pass between the land and Isle Dumet, you must keep nearer to the land than to the isle, because of several banks which run out from the said isle towards the land. And from the Cardinals to Croisic, the course is f about E S 4 leagues, then you pass between Isle Dumet and a ledge of rocks, called Le Four, which is very dangerous. When you have a mind to steer witli safety in that passage, you must not bring the high steeple of La Tour de...
