You foolish fellow, cried Bertram, to give away your money! I wonder what uncle will say! I hope he will think I have done right, said Theodore. Come, Bertram, I am sure, if you give only half of your five dollars to poor Patrick, you will never be sorry. I!--I give my money to an Irishman, --no, indeed, I am not so green! Let him work and earn it, --he was made for it, replied Bertram, rudely. Mr. Sinclair raised a subscription for the family of O Rafferty, and in a few days, they were comfortably fixed in a little cottage, not far from the spot where the other one had stood. Ah, how merrily the silver bells echoed in Theodore s heart, when, the next Sabbathday, Patrick and his wife were able to go to meeting dressed in the clothes which his own five dollars had paid for. Which of you would not rather possess the feelings of the generous Theodore, than the selfish heart of Bertram, who had already spent the whole of his money upon--himself I Mr. Sinclair had often warned Bertram againt the use of guns and pistols, and had, indeed, forbidden him to touch them. But Bertram, like some other boys, who think they know as much as their father, laughed at the idea of not being able to fire a gun, without danger. He had long wanted to possess one, and when he received his uncle s...
