Reviews

This book is definitely not easy to get going on reading through but extremely exciting to see. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. I am pleased to explain how here is the finest book i actually have read inside my individual daily life and may be he best book for ever.

Dept. of Commerce, National Telecommunications and Information Administration ; Springfield, VA : For sale by the National Technical Information Service, 2001. OCLC Number: (OCoLC)49793712 Subject: Vocoder -- Testing. Excerpt: . . . band contains periodic energy (voiced) or noise-like energy (unvoiced). The IMBE decoder uses this parameter set to reconstruct an approximation to the original speech signal. Filtered white noise is used to generate unvoiced components, and a bank of harmonic oscillators generate the voiced components. These two signals are combined to generate the final decoder output. 3. 5 AMBE Vocoder The AMBE vocoder is used in several satellite-based mobile communication systems. It has a 4. 8 kbps sample rate. Its processing is much the same as the IMBE vocoder, but contains some algorithmic improvements that are said to lead to higher speech quality and greater robustness to both acoustic background noise and channel errors. 3. 6 ACELP Vocoder The ACELP vocoder considered here is the one used in the TETRA system as an open digital standard defined by the European Telecommunications Standards Institute (ETSI). The vocoder has a bit rate of 7. 2 kbps including forward error correction (FEC). The ACELP vocoder algorithm is based on the CELP coding model, but ACELP codebooks have a specific algebraic structure imposed upon them. This structure is intended to allow for more efficient codebook searching and better fitting excitation signals. A frame length of 30 ms is used. These frames are further subdivided into 4 sub-frames that are 7. 5 ms long. The linear prediction model used in ACELP includes a pair of filters. The first filter is a long-term prediction filter...
