From some plants the cuttings may be made any time during the winter or early spring. Cuttings should be made from the newest growth and the strongest shoots are selected (Fig. 91). The cuttings may be tied into bundles of twentysfive to one hundred each, and a label placed with them. Store them in damp sawdust in a cold cellar. In late spring set them in furrows in the garden, with one or two buds showing above ground (Fig. 92). Press the soil firmly against them after setting. Simple hardwood cuttings should be made of grapevine, willow, spirea, dogwood, currant, gooseberry, hardy Japanese rose, and others. All woody plants are not readily propagated by cuttings, but gardeners have found that this method is the best for...
